

Directors Responsibilities for Health & Safety

Who is the course for?

This course is aimed at Directors and senior managers of any company, large or small that is connected with the construction industry. No prior knowledge is required to attend and the atmosphere will be open and friendly as delegates with a great deal in common share their experiences.

Why must I attend?

We lead from the top - effective safety management within any company must start with its biggest decision makers. It is vital that those who hold the greatest legal responsibilities fully understand what these are and how to implement them.

This course is a requirement of BUILD UK training standards and is widely recognised as the appropriate training level for Directors in the construction industry.

Course Benefits

Following an intense, interactive day, delegates will leave the course with a feeling of understanding and clarity as to their duties and the needs of their organisation.

Delegates will be better able to “speak the language” of health and safety by understanding key concepts.

We will investigate the legal, financial and moral obligations on directors to make the right decisions to protect their workforce.

The course focusses on simple, effective safety management systems in order to build confidence in taking effective, good value decisions.

Assessment

There will be continual assessment throughout the course, which will end with a multiple choice exam.
